Biological models in radiopharmaceutical development

The broth can then be incubated, for about 2 weeks, and examined for growth. Some genes may dominate and prevent others from being expressed.

Radiopharmaceutical

Recent research has discovered that autism, ADHD, bipolar disorder, major depression, and schizophrenia all share genetic roots. Nanoparticles when synthesized using poly 4-vinylphenol PVPh polymer radiolabeled ^{124}I along with surface-coated antibodies targeted to the endothelium can produce a stable PET imaging platform which can track the image in a translational model Han et al.

2.2 The Biological Model

A positron is emitted when a radionuclide decays via conversion of a proton to a neutron. Influenza epidemics have also been linked to schizophrenia Brown et al.

For instance, individuals with borderline personality disorder have been shown to have structural and functional changes in brain areas associated with impulse control and emotional regulation while imaging studies reveal differences in the frontal cortex and subcortical structures of individuals with OCD.
