Census Datasets

It has taken place among women and men; college graduates and people with less education; immigrants and non-immigrants; and younger, middle-aged and older adults.

Canada's Changing Religious Landscape

Previous version documented in the World Bank Microdata Library: - v6.

Statistics on Indigenous peoples

This is seen clearly when Canadians are divided into 10-year cohorts by year of birth. Two decades later, in 2008, 31% of the same cohort reported attending religious services that often. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota, 2015.

Canada

However, data analysis in 2011 indicates that the level of overstatement is about the same in Canada as in the United States. Unlike in previous decades, when a religion question was included in the census, in 2011 it was part of a voluntary survey among 4.
