These Shreds, Guardians of Human Memory: Papyrus and Culture in Late Antiquity

By using various Byzantine sources he estimates the entire cavalry forces of the empire, between the 8th and 10th centuries, were somewhere just over 10,000 and the number of infantry 20,000, and argues that the numbers of soldiers in Byzantine units should be numbered in the hundreds and not thousands, and the army in thousands and not tens of thousands. To be sure, papyrology was negatively affected by the development of Egyptology, which, owing to its spectacular novelty, embodied Egyptian studies on its own.

These were bands of barbarians, Huns, Herules, Goths or others who were bound by treaty to provide the empire with military units commanded by their own chiefs, in return for land or yearly subsidy. Under them, the droungarioi headed subdivisions called droungoi, each with a thousand soldiers. The small force of less than 16,000 men voyaged from the Bosphorus to North Africa on 500 ships protected by 92 dromons, or war-ships.
