Tarjamāt al

In December 2005 the Institute of Iranian Studies of the Austrian Academy of Sciences in Vienna organized a transdisciplinary conference entitled Diplomatische Praxis und Zeremoniell in Europa und dem Mittleren Osten in der Frühen Neuzeit. The Muslim scholar regarded the Arabic language as an indispensable primary tool for exploring dogmas of the Muslim faith. The remarkable development and collapse of this area can be seen as a direct consequence of its economic integration into the wider Muslim empire, a sort of Islamic globalization.

Rituals of Islamic Monarchy: Accession and Succession in the First Muslim Empire

In the late medieval and premodern periods, the title manāqib virtues became the most common term for single-subject biographies of religious exemplars.

Christian

Meanwhile, Aṭanāsiyūs had recommended that his successor should be Silfistrus, a Cypriot by origin who had worked with him in Syria but was then on Mount Athos.

Soil of Imam al
