Learning Centers, Part 1: Why They're Important

Learning centers allow children to see things through another person's point of view by working together to create, construct, and build. In sum, learning centers allow children to develop appropriately.

5 Common Challenges Facing Educators At School Beginning And Tools To Address Them

Differentiated Curriculum - Focusing on the individual learning goals of each student Our elementary schools practice differentiated instruction by individualizing teaching based on a student's interest, readiness, strengths, needs, and learning style. The flip that education took toward technology can come in handy even in this kind of situations.
