Those attending decided the principal stumbling block for road planners was financial. Except for especially violent crimes where hanging was called for, the courts usually whipped and banished or, just banished, the offender because there were no jails. Superintendent of the party was Henry T.

Pike's Peak Gold Rush

Travellers, wearied by crossing the plains, stopped at Fountain Creek along the Old Cherokee Trail and put their picks and pans to use. None of the larger Kansas towns were on this trail. In the early part of 1860 discussion of the Smoky Hill route occurred in the Kansas legislature and in some newspapers.
