Externalism About the Mind (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

In the actual situation events such as inflammation of the joints prompt, in general, arthritis utterances. So a plate P is identified by its relations to other plates — say, plates Q and R.

Externalism About the Mind (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

Individuation conditions of natural kind thoughts 2.

idealism

A planet is individuation dependent on a star around which it orbits in the sense that without this star, and resulting orbit, it would not be a planet but some other kind of celestial object. Further, some writers have worried that if one can know what one thinks, then one can know that one thinks. Sunburn is, in this sense, individuation dependent on solar radiation Content externalism is the thesis that at least some mental content is, similarly, individuation dependent on the nature of the environment, understood as a collection of circumstances that reside outside the biological boundaries of the individual.

Content, Computation and Externalism

Cognition, on this view, still resides in the head. Rather than existence or truth that is relativized, the meanings of their terms differ. The truth-conditions of the utterances also differ.

Internalism and Externalism in the Philosophy of Mind and Language

The wall of the human heart is composed of three kinds of tissue the pericardium, myocardium and the endocardium. It is reminiscent of the industrial age where the focus of most definitions was on efficiency and control.

Externalism and Internalism in the Philosophy of Mind

According to such a model, the boundaries of cognitive processes are not always inside the skin.
