Production process for Sandvik's coated steel strip steel — Sandvik Materials Technology

In majority of applications of metals, the importance of the corrosion factor does not warrant the use of expensive corrosion-resistant alloys. Tin is cathodic to iron.

MARINE GRADE NON

For example, the maximum dimensions of pores in the coating may be reduced from 1 or more micrometers across to less than 400 nanometres across or less than 300 nanometres across.

InnoVoc Solutions Technology Enables Powder Coating

The amplitude of the positive voltage pulses is potentiostatically controlled, that is controlled with respect to voltage, and the amplitude of the negative voltage pulses is galvanostatically controlled, that is controlled by reference to current.

Estimating non

The electrons which are released by the corroding metals enter the steel structures, which become cathodic and, therefore, do not corrode.

Therefore, there is a need to develop alternative technologies that make it possible to obtain coatings of the desired composition with higher contents of the second component and enabling the use of standard galvanic and chemical processes for building matrix metal.

SealingLife Technology

These coatings specially formulated to be resistant to water, heat and have high coverage protection. They also have a lower electrophoretic mobility due to the lack of electrostatic charge.
