Kaisariani Monastery

The impressive Monastery of Asterion that looks like a fortress and the Monastery of Agios Ioannis Prodromos of Kareas, just outside the district with the same name, complete the panorama of religious treasures of the district. The wealthy Benizelos family subsidized the frescoes, painted in 1682 by Ioannis Ypatos, from the Peloponnese, according to the inscription on the western wall. The monastery is mentioned by Pope Innocent III after the Fourth Crusade, but seems to have remained in Greek Orthodox hands, unlike other churches and monasteries that were taken over by Latin Roman Catholic clergy.
