And, of course, we can assume that especially the Chinese script as an ideographic script the character as a symbol has developed and invented wonderful styles of calligraphy. All versions we possess now are Tang time tracing copies. He criticized the chancellery or clerical script lishu of the Qin-Han Dynasties that forced each character into a square box, making smaller character bigger and complicated characters smaller and unreadable.

Su Dongpo sheng ping ji qi zuo pin shu ping (1979 edition)

In the quiet Chinese villages, after a long snowy winter, her rapid singing signaling the arrival of Spring is sheer joy. The second discovery was made by the French expeditioner Aurel Stein 1901 and the Swedish adventurer Sven Hedin 1928 in Chinese Turkestan and Dunhuang, where they found thousands of wooden and bamboo slips from the Han period.

Chinese porcelain painters and marks on dated porcelain

You will see the same character on paintings; where you might alternatively see 'xie' meaning to write, as in the Chinese literati world, paintings are 'written', showing the close relationship in the Chinese mind between calligraphy and painting - both being executed with the same instrument.

Wei Yingwu: New Years Day Send This to the Capital

While Song time calligraphers made investigations into the oldest extant writings of Chinese and extensively used seal script and chancellery script zhuanshu and lishu for their works of art, Ming time literati and artists relied only on the hardwood boards as models for their artworks, and not, like the Song artists, Zhou bronze vessels and the old commemorative stone tablets.
