Study Island for Schools

Although a principal may have the final say, teachers should be given a platform to express their feelings or provide advice for the principal, especially when the issue will directly affect the teachers.

Improve Grades with These Study Group Ideas

This is much more difficult to do independently, and is best done by interacting with others.

Coping during COVID

If they've fallen behind, meet with them and create a plan to usher them toward success. While supporting your students, remember the importance of also tending to your own self-care. School administrators may discuss school-wide programs and policies, and post-high school options that parents and guardians of juniors and seniors need to know about.

Develop Study Skills

Ser inclusivo de manera pública y propositiva Encontrar maneras para que todos los miembros de la comunidad escolar sepan que la escuela es un lugar seguro, todos son bienvenidos y que las palabras y acciones discriminatorias son inaceptables. I plan to treat my online classes like a job.

Coping during COVID

Our research study shows that Study Island meets ESSA requirements and confirms that when used consistently, for as little as 30 minutes per week, per subject, Study Island produces significant growth outcomes for students.

Coping during COVID

A principal should use the resources at hand when making decisions. Many schools provide nutritious breakfast options before the first bell.

Supporting your child at school

Are there students who are difficult to reach or who just don't seem to care? This brings school conversation to the citizens, and keeps them up-to-date on what is going on in the system. Have a planner for school only.

Study Skills: Using Study Groups Effectively

To keep my research organized, I created an online flashcards account and keep the tab open while online. Assess your school, classroom and self. This is a good time to be reflecting on the current and historical influences that shape your school's culture.
