Truth Commissions and Reconciliation: The Example of South Africa

Creation and Mandate The TRC was set up in terms of the Promotion of National Unity and Reconciliation Act , No 34 of 1995, and was based in Cape Town. The Truth and Reconciliation Commission There is a danger, however, when government sees the print-publication profit model as the natural and only way of producing sustainable publications. Throughout the world, citizens in countries which have undergone a transition from authoritarian, repressive regimes to embryonic democracies have had to confront two conflicting imperatives - the need to ensure stability and national unity and the need to create justice by punishing those who have committed crimes.
