A literature review to explore integrated care for older people

The trust then put a structural solution in place: it physically collocated the health and social care professionals to signal that they would collaborate from then on.

Health system takes an 'Epic first' approach to integrating all data, including SDOH

MDTs consist of practitioners and professionals from health, care and allied disciplines and sectors that work together to provide holistic, person-centred and coordinated care and support.

Social isolation, loneliness in older people pose health risks

Phase 2 consists of rehabilitation involving rehabilitation centres, specialized nursing homes and home care and finally phase 3 consists of long-term support. We have thus involved all the people responsible for and intensively participating in the development and implementation of the service charter in the chain and in its individual organizations. Thus, the consideration of other avenues of data collection and exchange is essential to the subcommittee's task.

5. Improving Data Collection across the Health Care System

The goal was to excite the staff about a new way of working.
