Rajiv

All this ladies and gentlemen must prompt you to give back a little of your time and your experience whilst you are functioning as a sitting member. When I was first nominated in 1999, as a member of the Rajya Sabha, I persuaded myself to believe out of purely selfish motives that I could attend a couple of hours or a few minutes of the proceedings each day and go back to my active practise in the Supreme Court.

This is not prohibited — but it is not expected of you — it is simply not ethical. Political parties have been all along in effect destroying the very fabric of federalism.

This book is valuable reading for anybody interested in the past and present of the discipline of criminology, explored through essays on morality, prisons, policing, criminal justice and penal policy. So long as you are a member the prefix sticks to you — which also means that you must deserve it, and live upto it.

Rajiv

There are no other instances I know of— except perhaps a third example: that of the distinguished former Speaker of the Lok Sabha Mr. One of the three persons who were so named to ask questions was the former polished diplomat and now parliamentarian, Mr. And that includes attending as a member of parliament even when you have no specific duty to perform, but to participate.

And morally he was right. And somehow this instils a feeling of togetherness, togetherness in doing something worthwhile. Which also reminds me of that other Mani Shanker Aiyer, not just the fine Parliamentarian but the one with a caustic tongue! Perhaps, but never in party politics.

Vol. 34, No. 3, July

So for us — for you and me — ETHICS in politics or in the law — is at a low ebb. So after I found that I was completely dissatisfied with myself, I realised that one must give up one activity or the other, and the activity which I gave up temporarily was my practice of law.
