Moritz College of Law

Alternative Dispute Resolution ADR includes a variety of hybrid processes built on the basic processes of negotiation, mediation and arbitration, now including med-arb, minitrials, summary jury, or judge trials and early neutral evaluation, which vary in providing opportunities for settlement of cases, advisory opinions, or decisions in both public court-annexed and private settings.

Resolving Racial Conflict: The Community Relations Service and Civil Rights ...

In 2007 and 2008, CRS assisted local law enforcement after the shooting death of Sean Bell in Queens, New York.

Alternative Dispute Resolution

Though one might think first of such issues as tenant—landlord disagreements or parent—teen communication problems, just about any problem that arises in the community can be amenable to this type of mediation.

Civil Rights Act of 1964

Founded under the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the CRS supports state and municipal government officials, law enforcement executives, and community leaders with resolving disputes based on racial and ethnic tensions, to improve police-community relations.

CRS FactSheet

CRS prepared an Arab, Muslim, and Sikh Awareness and Protocol seminar, and created a law enforcement roll-call video titled The First Three to Five Seconds. CRS does not have law enforcement authority and does not impose solutions, investigate or prosecute cases, or assign blame or fault. It is sometimes suggested that society should go further and subsidize ADR.
