

Candidates perception of voter competence - a comparison of winning and losing candidates

Laboratory for Political Research, Dept. of Political Science, University of Iowa - Who Cares? Explaining Perceptions of Compassion in Candidates for Office

Description: -

-
Elections.
Cognitive dissonance.
Political psychology. Candidates perception of voter competence - a comparison of winning and losing candidates

-
v. 4

Handbook of electronic materials ;
Report Laboratory for Political Research, Department of Political Science, University of Iowa ; no. 47
Candidates perception of voter competence - a comparison of winning and losing candidates
Notes: Includes bibliographical references.
This edition was published in 1972

Filesize: 9.75 MB

Tags: #Who #Cares? #Explaining #Perceptions #of #Compassion #in #Candidates #for #Office

Facial appearance affects voting decisions

Quarterly Journal of Political Science 4: 229—249. Gender stereotypes and the perception of male and female candidates. Research confirms that they tend to be seen as asexual, and, in contrast to women more generally, disabled women are not seen as nurturing.

Issues, the Spatial Theory of Voting, and British General Elections: A Comparison of Proximity and Directional Models on JSTOR

Huntley R, Hollien H, Shipp T 1987 Influences of listener characteristics on perceived age estimations. Additional barriers in this respect include documents in formats that cannot be read by the software and some financial costs of providing hardware and software. Participants The experiment was administered online to 803 subjects 400 men and 403 women by Qualtrics.

Who Cares? Explaining Perceptions of Compassion in Candidates for Office

J Speech Hear Res 12: 703—710. Perceptions of competence, however, appear to matter less when women are judging male and female candidates. Psychology and Aging 24: 941—954.

Candidates' Perception of Voter Competence: a Comparison of Winning and Losing Candidates

Ethics Statement Prior approval to conduct all elements of this experiment was granted by the Duke University Durham, North Carolina, USA Institutional Review Board on August 30, 2013 Protocol B0901. The neural basis of empathy.

The electoral connection in Australia: Candidate roles, campaign activity, and the popular vote

These funders had no role in study design, data collection and analysis, decision to publish, or preparation of the manuscript. Home style: House members in their districts. Effects of candidate disability on voter perceptions of candidate issue competence.

Perceptions of Competence, Strength, and Age Influence Voters to Select Leaders with Lower

Race and gender cues in low-information elections. Instead, perceptions of strength and competence appear to explain why voters prefer leaders with lower voices.

Related Books

- Process control and inspection for industry - 8-10 November 2000, Beijing, China
- Kenneth Martin
- Health in rural settings : contexts for action
- National question and Leninism - reply to comrades Meshkov, Kovalchuk, and others.
- Kerio Valley, past, present, and future - proceedings of a seminar held in Nairobi at the Institute