Stressing the link between security and development, he said it was in the collective interest to help those States face their challenges.

Build back better: women at the centre of decision

This meeting of the Security Council, for that reason, must be decisive and lead to a set of actions that guaranteed the security of all.

The day to day management of the Centre is the responsibility of the Director. The impacts of climate change must be primarily addressed by multilateral bodies that were inclusive, representative and transparent. Indeed, those States should be equal partners in such work and the United Nations, including the Council, should broaden its approach to dealing with international peace and security.

To better govern those spaces, his Government had created the blue economy department. If economies collapsed, forcing people from their homes, that migration could have destabilizing effects around the world. KAREN TAN Singapore said climate change posed a risk to national and international security, including transboundary issues, such as pollution, and if States failed, terrorism.

Facts and figures: Women's leadership and political participation

Specialized technical assistance was particularly important in that regard, as was public-private partnership.

Technical staff of national institutions, local practitioners and researchers will collect sex-disaggregated data by use of the questionnaire. The mineral resources of some islands could be seen as mere possessions readily available for the highest bidder or the strongest military force, with growing rivalries between major powers. Small island developing States faced a wide range of challenges in pursuing sustainable development and Turkey believed the G20 — whose presidency it currently holds — had an important contribution in building resilience in those countries.
