In Heterosyncrasies, Karma Lochrie looks to the foundation of modern society in the Middle Ages to undertake a profound questioning of the heterosexuality of that history. Towards the later Middle Ages, however, lesbian encounters were more harshly condemned, often punishable with burning at the stake.

In these interpretations, the Fall is caused by an exaggerated spiritual weakness in Woman, which manifests specifically in a weakness for homoeroticism. Under this definition, sodomy between women would have been impossible. The only versions that have survived are those preserved in chronicle accounts and the refutations of Lollard heresy by Roger Dymmock soon after the list appeared.
