Edward Gibbon (part 1)

I cannot repent of having neglected her advice. Bennett, Essays on Gibbon Cambridge: privately printed, 1980.

Memoirs of My Life and Writings, by Edward Gibbon

Gibbon espouses no dogma of natural and inevitable progress in history, for he is not a historicist. I spent fourteen months at Magdalen College; they proved the fourteen months the most idle and unprofitable of my whole life: the reader will pronounce between the school and the scholar; but I cannot affect to believe that Nature had disqualified me for all literary pursuits. Voltaire represented the characters best adapted to his years, Lusignan, Alvarez, Benassar, Euphemon.

Gibbon Bibliography (Craddock)

After some trials in France and Holland, which were defeated by his fortune or his character, a genius that might have enlightened or deluded the world, was buried in a country living, unknown to fame, and discontented with mankind.

Edward Gibbon

But justice obliges me to declare, that, as far as relates to myself, this assertion is false; and that I never conversed with a priest, or even with a papist, till my resolution from books was absolutely fixed. Our imagination is always active to enlarge the narrow circle in which Nature has confined us. London: Cassell, and New York: Macmillan, 1956.

Biography

Do you know something we don't? But Nature had designed him to think as he pleased, and to speak as he thought: his piety was offended by the excessive worship of creatures; and the study of physics convinced him of the impossibility of transubstantiation, which is abundantly refuted by the testimony of our senses.
