In both cases, cadmium screens were used to eliminate the thermal neutrons from the incident beam. The results are, respectively, for a 78 Density Measurement Figure 4.

The above relationships have to be established by calibration though, in principle, it might be possible to calculate the relationships if all the nuclear data were accurately known.

This problem could be overcome, if the water was saline and of known salinity, by determination of the chlorine content. Limited laboratory studies using vertical, small 12 Types of Multiphase Flows, Flow Patterns and Flow-Pattern Maps 5. Neutronic-acoustic detection of the onset of bulk boiling in liquid sodium.
