The United States also asserted its right to withdraw from the treaty after a specified period of time, but the Soviets argued that article 15 of the treaty did not permit withdrawal as a consequence of the successful development of an effective strategic defensive program.

Return to Armageddon: The United States and the Nuclear Arms Race, 1981

To place SLBMs in all 656 missile tubes on 41 fleet ballistic missile submarines, Lockheed produces three variants of the Polaris before the fourth variant becomes the Poseidon C-3. Yes, they did, until October 1964. The Growing Threat of Horizontal Nuclear Proliferation The inability of the superpowers to effectively curb the growth of their own nuclear arsenals during the Cold War set a bad example for nonweapon states contemplating the acquisition of nuclear weapons.

Gore, Albert 1907

No wonder Kennedy planned to replace the PGM-19 and PGM-17 as it turns out with the UGM-27 as dozens of American SSBNs were launched in the five years after the conclusion of the Cuban Missile Crisis. Even SDIO Director General Abrahamson admitted as much. He didn't believe his obligation was to his party.
