of tractors, combines, harvesters and other farm implements.

Changes in American Society

One assistance program covered by the proposed rule, state General Assistance, is not available in the extract.

Henry Clay's American System Economic Plan

Supreme Court invalidated parts of the AAA. However, Congress lacked the power to regulate foreign commerce or compel the states to follow a unified trade policy, and Britain proved unwilling to negotiate.

Henry Clay's American System Economic Plan

In 1793, another mechanical entrepreneur, Eli Whitney, graduated from Yale and spent some time as a tutor on a cotton plantation in Georgia.
