Leaving No One Behind: Multidimensional Child Poverty in Botswana

The importance of choice and definition for the measurement of child poverty-the case of Vietnam.

Half of Lesotho languishing in poverty

Results show that disabled children, orphans, children living in larger families, families headed by unmarried couples and living in rural areas are more likely to be multidimensionally poor. Our results are consistent with the case of Nicaragua Espinoza-Delgado and Klasen.

Poverty

The high literacy rate is mainly because of the free education system in Botswana today.

Many escape to rural areas as urban poverty bites

The survey aims to provide a comprehensive set of indicators designed to produce multidimensional welfare indicators at both household- and individual-level to allow for enriched and in-depth analyses.
