The Standards Statistics Company developed its first index of 233 US companies in 1923. On the other hand, funds will seldom drop as quickly or as much as some riskier stocks will and will often take less time to recover. This may sound confusing, but essentially it means the fund must own the stock for either 60 days before the ex-dividend date or a combination of days before and afterward, adding up to at least 60 days.
