STRAFFORD COUNTY NH

But we are grateful to remember many women who needed no arguments, whose clear insight and reason, pronounced in the outset that a woman's soul was as well worth saving as a man's; that her independence and free choice are as necessary and as valuable to the public virtue and welfare; who saw and still see in both, equal children of a Father who loves and protects all. The forethought of the town in providing the representatives to the General Court with alternative instructions to act as delegates to a Provincial Congress was justified by the event. In this way a church could never run down in point of numbers, so long as unconverted persons enough to keep it up were willing to own the covenant of baptism.

This prosperity resulted from protracted peace, and freedom from great political excitement. It is bounded on the north by Lebanon, east by Grantham, south by Cornish and west by Hartland, Vermont. In early times the Meeting-House was commonly used for civil as well as ecclesiastical purposes, and there the town-meetings were held.
