Armées françaises au Levant

See Thomas, Empires of Intelligence, 87. For example, the police coordination mandated by the 1936 Convention for the Suppression of Illicit Traffic in Dangerous Drugs had existed, between Egypt and numerous countries, for a decade. The discussion here addresses the role of schools as a focus for conflict and cooperation among French officials and educators working in the Levant, as a forum for Franco-Syrian colonial interaction and as an object of international diplomatic dispute as Syria gained its independence.

A COMMENT ON EDWARD J. ERIKSON'S REVIEW OF YÜCEL GÜÇLÜ, AND THE ALLIES IN CILICIA, 1914

As for Haidar, a district court inconvenienced the owner of Lebanon's second-largest cannabis field—whose 52,000 square meters would have produced 104 tons of hashish—with a SP200 fine, the value of 220 grams. It climbed to a minor peak of 6,000 in 1928 before falling back to 1,500 after 1930, where it leveled off. It is not simply that the trade was conducted by poor urbanites, sailors and chauffeurs, merchants with an illegal side business, and transnational professional traffickers.
