Tom O'Bedlam Reads Poems.

Alleluia is basically a sexbot; April will do anything if you touch her supple boobies; Jaspin's lady serves no purpose other than being his sexual partner. Plainly they were his men.

Tom O'Bedlam: Nearly Compete Lyrics

Yup, thousands of them all sharing the visions. It was a little like saying, You ought to consider a career as a fire hydrant. If it happened at all the numbers were certainly small, though there were probably large numbers of mentally ill travellers who turned to begging, but had never been near Bedlam.

Poet's Musings: Tom O'Bedlam Reads Poetry

I don't trust such praise. There are more suns than anybody can count, and all of the suns have planets, and those planets have people on them, not people like us, but people all the same.
