But it now comes with an added geo strategic dimension of giving China access to ports and roads that extend from the Gulf of Oman and the Arabian Sea into western China and Central Asia and Afghanistan.

Foreign Policy

President Eisenhower wrote to Nehru assuring him that if the aid to Pakistan was misused against India, the US would take immediate action to thwart such aggression. The US also reinstated a military-training program for Pakistani officers in its military institutions.

Pakistan's Foreign Policy 1947

An important step was taken in 1959 when Pakistan approached China for border demarcation between the two countries. With Saudi Arabia and the United States de-linking conflict between India and Pakistan from their respective relationships with those countries, Pakistan is being forced to reevaluate how it engages its traditional partners on the defining feature of its foreign relations with many countries: competition with India. Regarding Iran, there have been failures in the way Pakistan had handled its regional policy.
