The Media Narrative of Black Men in America Is All Wrong

Even more alarming, recent research suggests that racially biased policing by black officers seeking approval from white peers may in fact increase the expression of bias among white officers in the department.

The Black Police: Policing Our Own

. Forman explains that while there was a century-old tradition of gun ownership within the black community to protect against the tyranny of white violence pp. Who knew about such things? They become victims of perception.

Black women, the forgotten survivors of sexual assault

Researchers have found that simply thinking about crime is sufficient to trigger unconscious racial biases in police officers and that these biases influence their behaviors in ways that disadvantage blacks. The news media also vilifies black people by presenting black crime as more threatening than their white counterparts. Second, implicit and explicit biases likely shape how and when police officers of all races exercise that discretion.

The dangerous myth of the 'missing black father'

News, stories, photos, videos and more. While the very presence of a police car driving parallel to a running pedestrian could be somewhat intimidating,.
