Sage comme une image, de Ruth Rendell

In a way, all three of them are acted on in the beginning of their stories the novel very cleverly tells three stories for the first half, only gradually interweaving them in a surprising and satisfying way and none of them have power. He wants her to have a beautiful home and only Teddy as her friend.

Sage comme une image

This book is more in the style of her Barbara Vine books in that it examines the lives of damaged people; Teddy Brex who as a young adult values beauty beyond everything else, Francine Hill, a young lady who when a young child was present when her mother was shot and Julia the psychotherapist who married Francine's father. He's really a dear little boy, and quiet as a mouse.

Sage comme une image by Ruth Rendell

The young people here end up damaged in different ways. Her elegant prose cannot be matched in this genre. Teddy Brex n'a reçu dans son enfance aucun amour.

Sage (comme une image)

Julia is less worthy of our sympathy.
