History of immigration to the United States

Before 1845 most Irish immigrants were Protestants. Adding another 12,000,000 illegal immigrants of which about 80% are thought to be Mexicans would bring the Mexican family total to over 16,000,000—about 16% of the Mexican population.

This is not to discredit the lesser though still significant presence of red deer bones.

Irish cuisine

The sizable presence of hazelnuts at many archeological assemblages in both Mesolithic Ireland and Britain suggest the nut was important, and may have even been used as a form of currency, as acorns were for Native Americans of California during the same period. Inter-marriage with people of other nationalities was not frequent, at least until the third generation. Large scale immigration resumed in the 1830s from Britain, Ireland, Germany, and other parts of Central Europe as well as Scandinavia.
