Statutory interpretation

The Supreme Court held that literal interpretation is the rule and only if the language of an enactment is ambiguous recourse to another rule can be taken. As all the statutes are drawn up in form of language, therefore, these problems are inherent in statutes as well, which will give rise to uncertainty and inexactness, hence, there will always be a need of interpreting statutes so that their correct meanings may be ascertained as was intended by the legislature.

Interpretation of statute

Legal language is technical because law is meant to be clear and unambiguous and state the whole matter comprehensively as to avoid any uncertainty in future.

Interpretation of statute

These are the rules which are evolved for determining the real intention of the legislature.

Chapter 1 introduction to interpretation of statutes

· Golden Rule of Interpretation. The accused contended before the court that a charge under section 498A and 498B of Indian Penal Code can only be levied in the case of counterfeiting of Indian currency notes and not in the case of counterfeiting of foreign currency notes.
