At the end of the third New York season, Cook and Glaspell decided to step away from the Players for a year-long sabbatical 1919—20. It has been argued that the play is an example of early feminist drama. To me, the justification of the Provincetown Players' existence - aside from discovering Eugene O'Neill, a mixed blessing - and he would have been discovered anyway, I thought - was in two plays: one was Susan Glaspell's The Inheritors; a beautiful, true, brave play of war-time.

Starz drama 'Hightown,' partially filmed on LI, to premiere May 17

Cook wanted to stage Reed's one-act play, Freedom, for the opening bill and Louise, urged by Cook, began writing her own one-act play to be staged later in the summer.
