The old building, which contained an interesting collection of monuments in memory of the Holtes, the Ardens, the Erdingtons, and other county families, has been lately enlarged by the extension of the nave and aisles eastward, and widening the chancel so as to accommodate about 1,200 people, instead of 500. Pepys 1666 describes his dining with the king's servants from meat that came from his Majesty's table, 'with most brave drink, cooled in ice; and I, drinking no wine, had metheglin, for the king's own drinking, which did please me mightily. MERRIAL is a favorite tune for choir use in evening services.
