Therefore in his governing of men he differentiates between upper and lower classes , permitting the rich to have enough to display their noble position, but not to the point of arrogance, and the poor to have enough to support life, but not to reach the point of anxiety. Thus dieting the Former Han dynasty we find the exponents of the Confucian classics aU expounding these works in terms of the yinyang ideology; this indeed is the peculiar characteristic of the New i See vol. Spring, autumn, winter, and summer are all its instruments for this.
