Although the San culture had evolved significantly, archaeologists studying the tools of the modern San could still study the way ancient San tracked and hunted animals and gathered native plants. Centuries of Romans have built it up—home on top of ancient home, modern home on top of medieval home. Wind, storms, rain, fire, eclipses of the sun or moon, the appearance of a lion, the shape of a sheep's liver, and the movement of the stars all were signs from the gods according to Mesopotamian religion, and their priests could read such signs.
