Must we really “love one another or die”? A few words on Auden’s “September 1, 1939”

Like Orwell, who was actively engaged in explorations of leftist politics in the 1930s, Auden was taken up with the great debate of his age pitting individualism and a fatigued perception of liberal democracy against the excitement and anticipation of a mass state devised on Marxist proletarian ideals. Margaret and Henry Rolf Gardiner were the children of the distinguished Egyptologist Sir Alan Gardiner and his part Austro-Hungarian Jewish part Swedo-Finnish wife, Hedwig, née von Rosen. ## The Closet Professor: W.H. Auden

You probably know by now how much I love poetry, and Auden is a beautiful poet.

Singular in Jane Austen and elsewhere: Anti

It was particularly appropriate that the event took place in the recently built Auden theatre at Gresham's School, Holt, where Auden had been a pupil. What use would a tyrant have for something that makes nothing happen? I think Stravinsky was right when he spoke favorably of Auden as a moralist—one of the few, he considered, who maintained a heuristic approach. His , , argues in his introduction to Selected Poems that Auden's practice reflected his sense of the persuasive power of poetry and his reluctance to misuse it.

Gray crisply tracks the lives of the six undergrads up and down mostly down the greased pole of literary life. Is there something immoral in the poor wishing to enjoy the creature comforts the Middle Class take for granted? What distinguishes sainthood in this poem is a life of complete and utter ordinariness. The poem appears to protest against a world in which systems interested in scientific data fail to capture the human quality of life, and mass organizations and commercial exploitation attempt to obliterate originality within humankind.
