2 Global forces, urban change, and urban management in Africa (cont. 3)

In those cases, the intermediation of local party-political leaders or, sometimes, foreign members of the UMCP staff was essential in securing access for local volunteers with no legal mandate to enter private premises. Even after decades of rapid urban growth and the emergence of cities of 1 million people or more, the majority of the population continues to live in rural areas.

Charles Becker

Young and restless can be a volatile mix.

Sources On Environmental Ethics

Evidence from a variety of African countries indicates that in the face of the severe contraction of urban incomes and employment, rural households are now plagued by declining remittances and nonfarm employment opportunities, and a reduced demand for rural agricultural products. Achieving such a degree of familiarity with the terrain required the support of local CCM leaders. Download reference in Stecklov, G.

Movement patterns and the medium sized city: Tenants on the move in Gweru, Zimbabwe

It used to be assumed that the marginal productivity of rural labour is zero in heavily overpopulated countries like Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Egypt, the Java region of Indonesia, and in much of Latin America where the mass of the rural population has no access to land. The movement of population alters social and economic structures within sending communities in ways that increase the likelihood of subsequent migration.
