My grandfather was the greatest admirer of Sir Winston Churchill and had a large painting of him behind his desk, in his office. When Nazi officials went on the radio to talk to Germans like Hübener, they spoke of impending victory and praised the greatness of their country.

Voices of World War II, 1937

In addition to Luftwaffe pilots, who often tuned into the BBC and American forces stations as a form of light relief from the endless propaganda and volksche music on German stations — at least the Gestapo could not arrest you in the air — concerned German citizens, anti Nazis and many servicemen whose lives depended on accurate news decided that the risk was worthwhile by tuning into Allied broadcasts to find out how Germany was really faring. Adolf Hitler, address on the Sudeten Germans before a Nazi Congress in Nuremberg. Finally, these broadcasts are simply interesting.
