At home and abroad: a sketchbook of life, scenery, and men : Taylor, Bayard, 1825

I have tried, since then, to recall the magic of that day; but in vain. NEW YOric, AugU8t 4, 1859. Here it was necessary to make an effort; we were wet as drowned rats, and wanted to dry ourselves.

At Home And Abroad: A Sketch

I'll help'em along, that I will! Thereupon, Herr Nusch, one of the Senate, filled the mighty bowl, and lifting it to his mouth with both hands, drank it dry, without stopping to take breath. Now it is a grand and beautiful expanse, over which I cannot leap in thought so readily.

. Think of rapping the knuckles of Jupiter! We learned, too late to take advantage of the information, that the great Fair of Roth-am-See was being held in the meadows of Musbach, not more than a league out of our way. At the next station beyond, we passed an excursion train from Shrewsbury, a mile of cars, mostly open, and crammed with delighted children, to whom we all waved our handkerchiefs in return for their shouts.

At Home and Abroad: A Sketch

Among them I found the resting-place of Durer, which has been carefully restored; of Hans Sachs, with a poor specimen of his poetry upon it; of Peter Vischer, whereon a crown of oak-leaves, cast there many days before, was rotting in the rain; of Veit Stoss; and lastly, of the good Willibald Pirkheimer, ever to be remembered as Dürer's friend.

A superannuated door-keeper admitted us into the grounds and then went to call the guide, who was working in the garden. The only inhabitants were an old man and a clock. A quaint fancy, but how significant! A few flowers were growing rankly about the corners of the stones, but so desolated and ruined is the aspect of the place, that even without the prohibition posted up at the entrance of the gate, no one would venture to pluck them.
