3. Accuracy and reliability Source data and statistical techniques are sound and statistical outputs are fully portrayed.	3.1 Source data—Source data available provide an adequate basis to compile statistics.	3.1.1 Source data are collected from complete and valid data collection programs that take into account sampling conditions. 3.1.2 Source data reasonably approximate the definitions, scope, classifications, valuation, and time of recording required. 3.1.3 Source data are timely.
3.2 Statistical techniques—Statistical techniques employed conform to sound statistical procedures.	3.2.1 Data compilation employs sound statistical techniques. 3.2.2 Other statistical procedures (e.g., data adjustment and transformation, statistical analysis) employ sound statistical techniques.	3.2.1 Data compilation employs sound statistical techniques. 3.2.2 Other statistical procedures (e.g., data adjustment and transformation, statistical analysis) employ sound statistical techniques.
3.3 Assessment and validation of source data—Source data are regularly assessed and validated.	3.3.1 Source data—including censuses, sample surveys and administrative records—are routinely assessed, e.g., for coverage, sample error, response error, and nonresponse error; the results of the assessments are monitored and made available to guide planning. 3.3.2 Main intermediate data are validated against other information where applicable. 3.3.3 Statistical discrepancies in intermediate data are identified and investigated. 3.3.4 Statistical discrepancies and other potential indicators of problems in statistical outputs are investigated.	3.3.1 Source data—including censuses, sample surveys and administrative records—are routinely assessed, e.g., for coverage, sample error, response error, and nonresponse error; the results of the assessments are monitored and made available to guide planning. 3.3.2 Main intermediate data are validated against other information where applicable. 3.3.3 Statistical discrepancies in intermediate data are identified and investigated. 3.3.4 Statistical discrepancies and other potential indicators of problems in statistical outputs are investigated.
