

Accounting for growth - ways accountants can add value to small businesses : a report to the Research Board of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales

Research Board, ICAEW - The Value of Big Data in an Accounting Firm

- Accountancy and business services employers support their new hires throughout their professional development. There are various accountancy bodies that offer qualifications. These include:
 - Association of Chartered Certified Accountants (ACCA);
 - Chartered Institute of Management Accountants (CIMA);
 - Chartered Association of Certified Accountants and Accountable Bodies (ICAEW);
 - Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland (ICAI);
 - International Federation of Accountants (IFAC);
 - Association of International Accountants (AIA);
 - and Chartered Institute of Public Finance & Accountancy (CIPFA).
- Part-time distance learning MBAs may also be useful as they can elevate your part-time degree to a post-qualification.

How can my career develop?

- As the majority of accountancy and professional services jobs require Consultative Committees of Accountancy Bodies (CCABs) or CIMA certification, once you are qualified there are many different career routes and opportunities. Overseas experience is often seen as a valuable addition to your CV.
- Post-qualification career progression varies, depending on individual aspirations within 10-15 years' post-qualification.
- For those choosing to stay within the professional service providers or in practice, career progression may be through becoming a partner or progressing to manager roles within two to five years after obtaining the qualification.
- Those choosing to work as internal providers, (in industry, commerce or the public sector), may progress through internal progression to manager roles within two to five years after obtaining the qualification.
- Increasingly, accountants are taking on a more strategic role in business. Those who aim high may make it to finance director or even chief executive.
