Consequently, the library board cannot convene in closed session to discuss a position vacancy, benefits and compensation for employment, or personnel policies for positions in general, unless for the specific purpose of discussing strategy for collective bargaining s. . The library board must ratify any union agreements involving library employees.

AE 11: The Library as Employer

The drive to bond is our social drive, but it is our loyalty to our library institution and to our community. No library administrator or board should seek to prevent an election or the formation of a bargaining unity, and certain rules must be followed if a majority of the library staff wishes to engage in collective bargaining.
