Jay's Treaty 8 Stat. 116 (1795)

Combs gives a lot of excellent background to the Jay Treaty situation. The Jeffersonians were opposed to Britain, preferring support for France in the wars raging in Europe, and they argued that the treaty with France from 1778 was still in effect. Article XI simply distinguished America from those historical strains of European Christianity which held an inherent hatred of Muslims; it simply assured the Muslims that the United States was not a Christian nation like those of previous centuries with whose practices the Muslims were very familiar and thus would not undertake a religious holy war against them.

Alexander Hamilton

Despite the public protests, President Washington signed the treaty in late August 1795 and many of the protests died down. Order a custom research paper on ANY topic.
