Class consciousness refers to a condition where people tend to perceive themselves in terms of their class background and this shapes their relationships with members of other classes. But the case is fundamentally different where a country claims either that its penal laws apply to other countries and to what takes place wholly within such countries or, if it does not claim this, that it may punish foreigners for alleged violations, even in their own country, of laws to which they were not subject. But they told us they were going to do it.
