But if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife. One at least of these brethren, as ALFORD strikingly remarks, saw on the right and on the left hand of their Lord, as He hung upon the tree, the crucified thieves; and bitter indeed must have been the remembrance of this ambitious prayer at that moment.

That conclusion is in total agreement with passages like Romans 7:1-4 where we learned that only death can break the union that exists between husband and wife.

Mark 10:9 Therefore what God has joined together, let man not Wherever Jesus was, the people flocked after him in crowds, and he taught them.

What does “what God has joined together, let no one separate” mean?

There is not to be separation! Guy, pour your wife out a glass of port. But he says that this was because of the hardness of heart of Israel. It is very desirable to be able to earn our bread; and where God has given men limbs and senses, it is a shame, by foolishness and slothfulness, to make themselves, in effect, blind and lame.

The phrase 'What God has joined together let no man put asunder'

When men like Sir Thomas More, Plato, Bulwer Lytton and the rest of them, have indulged in paper dreams of ideal worlds, they have always committed the fatal mistake of making the inhabitants insufferable bores, who have attained perfection—and when perfection is attained happiness ceases. While a husband seeking divorce had only to prove adultery, wives must additionally prove aggravating circumstances such as desertion, cruelty, incest, bigamy, rape, sodomy or bestiality.
