Evaluation of the use of therapeutic peptides for cancer treatment

Medications acting on the target with selectivity, specificity, and less side effects are needed. The present review provides an understanding of peptides and their applications for the management of different diseases, but with focus on neurodegenerative diseases. ### Development of an ApoA

Then various types of tumor targeting peptides and their applications in cancer research are represented.

Evaluation of the use of therapeutic peptides for cancer treatment

The blockage of NET in presynaptic membrane by Chi-conotoxin MrIA stops the reuptake of neurotransmitter noradrenaline, hence increasing the volume of noradrenaline in the synaptic cleft. For example,  $\omega$ -conotoxin MVII A 25 amino acids from Cone snail is the blocker of N-type Ca V2.

Evaluation of the use of therapeutic peptides for cancer treatment

Thrombosis is the obstruction of the blood vessels through the circulatory system due to the blood clot formation inside the vessels. Compared to traditional small molecule drugs, natural proteins and peptides exhibit higher specificity and potency to their targets.
