Collection: Notes from Bradfield Parish [births, marriages and deaths], 1539

No 23: John Francis, Blacksmith - this was almost certainly what today is known as Cherry Tree Cottage in Newlands Lane, which was originally the local Forge. No 39: Charles Neate's wife, Ann was listed as a Shoe Binder, but this was scratched through, as wives were not normally shown as workers or she may have ceased to carry on this trade.

transcripts, indexes and calendars of various Berks and Oxon parish Frewin Ann Frewin Peter Frewin Fanny Frewin George Frewin Jane Frewin Head??? No 17: Thomas Munday is listed as a 'Fruit Dealer' - he probably sold cherries from the local orchards including that adjacent to the new Maharajah's Well down in Reading. Nos 41-42: Between these two entries is one stating '4 houses building' - this may have been Ishree Terrace, the four terraced houses next to The Hope, then the Farmer and now Farmer's Cottage. No 19: The youngest child, a boy, is named as 'Baby'; he was just 3 weeks old and obviously they had not yet chosen a name for him! B Gibbs Julia Gibbs Kate Gibbs Head Wife Daughter Daughter Daughter Married Married 53 M 39 F 14 F 9 F 4 F Retired Customs Officer Scholar Scholar Scholar Culham, Oxon Ipswich, Suffolk Battersea? He was a pillar of the Stoke Row Independent Chapel.

Collection: Notes from the parish of Wolvercote, near Oxford (births, marriages and deaths), 1596

No 25: Jacob Clargo, Bricklayer - this house is 'Meadow side', the right-hand of a pair of Victorian cottages, the first, on the right-hand side, in Busgrove Lane. He also built and owned the Hope Beer House.

Collection: Notes from the parish of Wolvercote, near Oxford (births, marriages and deaths), 1596

No 47: Like No 39, Kate Francis's profession 'School Mistress, parish School' was struck through, probably for the same reason.
