Tax practitioners tend to use them to support their treatment of similar transactions. However, you can choose a method of accounting for your business that is different than the method used for your other income and deductions. Commissioner,18 the Tax Court held that the rental activities of a dermatologist who was employed full time by a hospital, but who also owned and managed six rental properties, constituted a business for the purpose of claiming homeoffice deductions.

Limited liability companies are organizations that are formed under state law to provide limited liability for their owners, who are called members, in the same way corporate shareholders are protected. This means that even though you have not actually received something, if it was credited to your account, set aside for you, or otherwise made available so you could get it at any time, it is still income. This is one of the most important questions you are asked on your tax return and you had better get it right the first time.
