The Selkirk settlement and the settlers : a concise history of the Red River country from its discovery, including information extracted from original documents lately discovered, and notes obtained from Selkirk settlement colonists : Bell, Charles N. (Charles Napier), 1854

The settlement also included several dozen who had been converted to Christianity. Other aborigines frequented the Red River area to trade at the HBC posts while resisting the exhortations of Roman Catholic and Protestant such as George-Antoine who called not only for their religious conversion but also for their cultural assimilation. Volunteers will be available to help answer questions and direct researchers.
